Inventory

Are you organisation's dollars asleep in the warehouse or working at Optimum Levels?

Money spent on inventory should be expected to earn a return. The correct level of inventory maximises the return on money invested. Stock investment above this level is waste; stock levels below the required level may jeopardise ongoing operations.

Inventory Management

Intelligent inventory management provides cost savings and customer satisfaction. Epica Solutions (Epica) offers a complete inventory management service. This ranges from initial spares support requirements, assessment of current inventory levels to high end products which generate time phased forecasts while optimising costs, examining constraints and service levels. The equation that sums up the situation is:

$$\text{ROI} = \text{Profit} / \text{Funds employed}$$

The return on investment on an inordinate amount of capital tied up in inventory will be greatly reduced. It is essential that all efforts be made to reduce the investment and still ensure that the quantities held are sufficient to service ongoing operations. The byword is "optimum" as stock shortages will also add significantly to costs, through lost production, lost sales, administrative costs and freight charges for remote locations.
